25X1C	that theprogram is the very heart of the over-all pacification
23/10	program and is considered most important to the Ambassador and MACV.
	It was stated that the Vietnamese are able to adapt to this progr truly a covert program. Mr. Helms explained that he has made and strong efforts to be relieved of the responsibility for this pr	_

	but with no success and that he now has a direct order to contin	ue to handle it. In response to a question as to why the Agency was not relie	eved, it was

25X1C	stated that it was his belief that we should not undertake would not be the case were this taken from the reserve. Further, if this were taken from the reserve, there is no pending request for replenishment of the reserve and this would leave the reserve dangerously low in FY 1968. Also it can be considered that the Southeast Asia war was not the type of emergency contemplated by the reserve concept. Mr. Helms agreed that there were a number of ways of accomplishing the funding. Mr. Andrews observed that by this method the Congress was in effect building the Agency reserve up. Mr. Helms observed that the Committee could provide other valid ways of meeting the increased costs of Southeast Asia, including use of the reserve if it so chose. Mr. Lipscomb still seems to have difficulty with this approach mentioning that he was unhappy with the Department of Defense deliberately under-funding and this seemed to be going in the same pattern.

	5. Mr. Helms then discussed our covert action programs and started to run down the list of activities subsidized by the Agency during
25X1C	fiscal 1966
25X1C
25/10
25X1C	There was discussion over whether to 20, (10	continue going down the list. Eventually it was agreed that the list would be furnished to Mr. Michaels to be available to the Subcommittee whenever they wished. Mr. Helms made it clear that he wanted to make full and factual information available to the Subcommittee but that he understood they could not keep all of these details in their minds and if the Chairman agreed, therefore, we would like to suggest the solution of leaving the list with the Subcommittee. The Chairman stated this was satisfactory.
	Mr. Helms then went on to point out that each of these activities is reviewed yearly to determine the value of continuing them. Also it was pointed out that for a number of years strenuous efforts have been made to find 25X1	alternative means of funding some of these activities
25X1	However, in general, our efforts have been fruitless. Furthermore, it was pointed out that many of these organizations originally and still today do not wish to receive Government funds on an overt basis. Mr. Mahon inquired as to the effect of the recent activity. Mr. Helms indicated that doubtless many of them will have to go on but the question is where will the funds be procured. In any event, this is a matter to which the Katzenbach committee is directing its attention and it is too early to predict the results.

- 6. Mr. Lipscomb asked the general question as to whether the threat of communism is any less today. Mr. Helms stated that he has made his position abundantly clear in various forums including congressional committees that while the character of the Soviet government has changed, its objectives have not and communism remains as serious a threat as before. He commented that he and Ambassador Bohlen discussed this recently and the Ambassador summed it up by saying that the attitude of the U. S. towards Russia has changed, but the Russian attitude to the U. S. has not. When queried as to the value of building bridges, the Director stated that this was Presidential policy and care must be taken to avoid being deluded about the nature of the threat while making efforts at building bridges.
- 7. Mr. Mahon then inquired about the reserve items and the Director touched on each of these utilizing the attached statements:

8. Mr. Lipscomb then discussed 25X1C his concern about the Agency releasing unclassified reports. He wished to know if we had authorized the Banking and Currency Committee to utilize this. He was informed that we had approved this since, in any event, it was unclassified and, therefore, in the public domain. The Director then pointed out that he had given orders as of yesterday that the Agency would issue no more unclassified reports. Mr. Lipscomb had a number of questions concerning this report as to substance. He then went on to point out that his discussions with our economic people and the briefings were less than satisfactory from his standpoint. He stated "they were not up to snuff." He also mentioned the incorrect charts utilized in the Defense Subcommittee briefing. Mr. Lipscomb obviously was sincerely and deeply concerned and even stated that he got the feeling that we were attempting to hide something. At the same time it was apparent that he was sincere in his criticism, indicating that the Subcommittee would be his forum for criticism and not the floor of the House.
